FAR EASTERN PARLIAMENT CONVENES IN VLADIVOSTOK

Foreign Intervention Is Scored By President Medvedeff

PLEAS IGNORED

Situation Improving, But Siberia Not Yet Ready For Soviet Regime

("Russia" News Agency)

Vladivostok, June 21 (delayed).—The Far Eastern Temporary Parliament was opened yesterday in Vladivostok. One hundred and eight members were present. Mr. Lagovsky, sixty years old was elected acting chairman of the Parliament.

Mr. Medvedeff, president of the Provisional Government, opened the assembly with a speech in which he stated that foreign intervention aided Kolchak and thus stimulated civil war in Siberia.

The protests made by the Zemstvo Boards and the Municipal Councils, he said, pleading for the necessity of pacifying the country, were ignored.

After January 31, the speaker continued, when Kolchak's administration was overthrown, the Vladivostok district Zemstvo board was called to resume authority in the district. Since then the situation has greatly improved.

The Japanese movements of April 4 and 5, said Mr. Medvedeff, greatly affected the people's Government, and interfered with peaceful development of the country.

PREVENTS UNIFICATION

Semenoff's adventure, declared the speaker, still prevents the unification of the Russian Far East. At the present time all Russians, including Semenoff's groups have recognised the necessity of a compromise. The main task of the Parliament is to bring the civil war to an end, to unite the Russian Far East, to discontinue the class struggle and to restore friendly relations with the foreign Governments.

Speaking to the Parliament, Mr. Nikiforoff, president of the Council of the State Departments, said:

SITUATION BETTER

"The economic situation in the district has been greatly improved. The Provisional Government is endeavoring to better financial conditions. The principles of Soviet administration cannot yet be put in practice in the Far East, for political reasons.

"The task of supplying the population with food has been laid upon the co-operative societies, with the Government controlling import and export.

"The events of April 4 and 5, produced chaos and forced the Government to do its work from the beginning again. The currency reform has improved the rate of exchange and put an end to profiteering.

"The Government is now occupied with the task of reducing government expenditures. The Government shortly will make report on the budget estimates to the Parliament."

The next meeting of the Parliament will be held on Tuesday.

TO STEADY EXCHANGE

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Vladivostok, June 24.—The Government has proposed to foreigners to deposit their old money in sealed packages with the banks until June 26, leaving exchange on the basis of the proclamation until a later date.

The international committee, however, refuses to recognise the money reform or to deposit their money with the banks. After a joint meeting today the foreign Consuls petitioned the Government for a fortnight's extension, during which time foreigners can register their claims. They state that they cannot accept the proposal for the deposit of money with the banks.

The Consuls are requesting instructions from their Governments.

A telegram from Nikolaevsk states that the Japanese are sweeping the mines, laid by the Partisans, and navigation has recommenced. Ships entering the port are searched by the Japanese.

Manchu Treasures Bring $11,000 After Battle Of Years In Court Here

Paintings From Time Thousand Years Before Christ, Involved In Suit Just Completed

Treasures of the Manchus which disappeared from the Imperial Palace at Peking at the time of the first revolution and fell into the hands of a man now in Shanghai were the basis of a civil suit settled yesterday in the Mixed Court.

Paintings, vases and other articles of antiquity were valued at Tls. 40,000, were involved in the suit.

Some of the paintings dated back to the period of B. C. 1133 when, following the overthrow of "Cathay," the "iron dynasty" was supplanted by the Nuchich—the "Golden"—a race akin to the more modern Manchus.

A case in which two paintings antedating the birth of Christ by more than a thousand years has necessarily attracted much attention.

CURIOS FROM PALACE

Plaintiff in the case demanded reparation in the sum of Tls. 40,000 or the restoration of the curios, which he declared were from the Imperial Palace of the Manchus, but his possession of which he did not explain.

He said that he had pawned them to the defendant for $2,500 and that he had offered $4,500 for their redemption, but that the defendant had confessed he had re-pledged them to another person and would redeem them at once.

It was charged that the articles were not redeemed and that damages were due.

The court found that the total list of curios from the Palace can be valued at only $11,000 and judgment was given in that sum by American Assessor Tenney and Magistrate Kwan together with costs.

A sum of $4,500, admitted by the plaintiff to have been offered in settlement, was excepted from the judgment, leaving the total sum of the decision $6,500 and costs.

Tsang Veh-ching filed the case against Zau Song-zeu.

HERE IS LIST

Here is a list of the articles involved in the case:

1 One scroll with painting of a kind of bamboo, known as Phoenix Tail, drawn by Kuh Tan-chu, an artist of the Yuan dynasty, bearing complimentary notes written by Emperor Chuen-loong and having been formerly kept in the Imperial Palace of the Manchus. Taels 6,000.

2 A pair of scrolls with paintings of nine peaches and nine turnips drawn by Tsiang Nan-sar, bearing complimentary notes written by Emperor Korn-she and the seals of Emperors Chien-loong and Cha-Ching, and having been formerly kept in the Imperial Palace.—Taels 7,000.

3 Scroll with painting of Kiu Zu-doo (meaning the "Nine Resemblances") and blue and green scenery drawn by Zie Vie-zung, bearing

RECKLESS MOTOR DRIVING AROUND SHANGHAI MUST STOP, SAYS COURT

British Assessor Declares Traffic Conditions Are Endangering Inhabitants

FINE DENIED OFFENDER

Future Attitude Indicated By Action Of Official In Truck Case

Better traffic regulation must be maintained in Shanghai Settlement in the future if motor-car drivers are to escape heavy penalties.

This was the warning issued yesterday by British Assessor Grant Jones in the Mixed Court, before he began the hearing of cases; and he showed that his words were not idle a short time later, when he sentenced a reckless motor-truck driver to 14 days imprisonment without the alternative of a fine.

When court opened yesterday the British Assessor stated that he was walking down Nanking Road on Wednesday evening and that he was startled by the chaotic traffic conditions. He said that every motor-car that passed was being driven at a rate that was entirely too fast.

Shortly after this statement was made a Chinese chauffeur employed by the Municipal Council was called before the official on a charge of having driven a truck recklessly, injuring a Sikh constable. The accident occurred at the Chekiang Bridge, when a fire was burning on North Soochow Road.

In handing down the decision of the court the Assessor said:

"There is too much negligence in driving and it has to be stopped. You are in the employ of the Shanghai Municipal Council and it is your duty to be careful. I shall not fine you but I will send you to prison for 14 days."

"QUIET NIGHT," IRELAND REPORT

Hunger-Strikers Must Face Consequences Of Acts, Says Bonar Law

(Reuter's Service)

London, June 23.—In the House of Commons today Mr. Denis Henry, Attorney-General for Ireland, stated that information had been received that morning that "Londonderry had had a comparatively quiet night." Civilians had fired occasional shots but it had not been necessary for the troops to fire. All was quiet at ten that morning.

Replying to Lieutenant-Colonel Wilfred Ashley, Mr. Bonar Law stated that the Government's policy now was that persons convicted of offences in Ireland who hunger-struck must face the consequences of their action.

ANTI-DUMPING BILL

Mr. Bonar Law also announced that the Government intended to proceed with the anti-dumping bill, but it would not be possible to introduce it before the recess.

Replying to Sir J. D. Rees, Mr E. S. Montagu, Secretary of State for India, stated that it was intended that India should be represented at the next International Labor Conference.

Membership of the League of Nations necessarily entailed expenditure by the participating countries, but membership would be very valuable to India.

Replying to Captain Wedgwood Benn, Lieutenant-Colonel Leslie Wilson stated that the Nauru agreement had not been submitted to the recent meeting of the Council of the League of Nations. The Government were of opinion that the agreement did not require to be so submitted.

FAMOUS RUSSIANS KILLED IN JAP GENERAL'S CAR

Utkin And Grajensky Reported Murdered While Sirodzu's Guests

("Russia" News Agency)

Vladivostok, June 21.—It is officially reported that Peter Utkin, member of the Russo-Japanese Truce Committee, was recently killed by Bochkareff's Cossacks at the station of Iman, in General Sirodzu's private car, while the General was absent.

It is also reported that one militiaman and Mr. Grajensky formerly a commissar in Kerensky's administration, were killed.

Mr. Utkin was prominent Communist leader. He advocated the necessity of arriving at an agreement with the Japanese. Both he and Mr. Grajensky were literary men.

EXILED BY ROMANOFF

Peter Utkin was [illegible] from which country he escaped to Australia.

After the revolution he returned to Vladivostok, in which city he played a prominent role as a political leader of great ability and popularity.

On June 29, 1918, he was arrested and put in prison with a number of other political leaders. He remained in jail until the Zemstvo assumed power in Vladivostok on January 31.

Mr. Utkin was elected a member of the Russo-Japanese Truce Committee, which was established with the object of smoothing the results of the Japanese movement of April 4 and 5. He was killed while on duty as a member of this committee.

GRAJENSKY FAMOUS

During Kerensky's administration Mr. Grajensky was appointed to the post of assistant to Mr. Panafidoff, as a commissar on civil affairs in the Amur and Maritime provinces.

He was a man of very moderate political convictions. For many years he was a member of the Social-Revolutionary party.

During the Bolshevik regime he resigned his post.

At the time when the Siberian Government under Mr. Vologodsky was formed he returned to his office, this time as a commissar in the same provinces. He soon resigned again on account of the Siberian Government growing reactionary.

For several months afterwards he occupied no position in the Government. Mr. Grajensky was a man of great ability as a journalist.

REIMERT FAMILY OFFERED $45,000 BY GEN. CHANG

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Peking, June 25.—The Cabinet yesterday afternoon approved General Chang Ching-yao's suggestion that he should offer to pay $45,000 compensation to the family of the Rev. W. Reimert. This decision has not yet been communicated officially to the American Legation.

General Chang Ching-yao aided that a soldier of the 11th Division had confessed to the murder, whereupon he was summarily executed.

General Chang thus takes upon himself the responsibility for the murder and is attempting to smooth over the situation; but the question remains whether monetary compensation will be considered by the American authorities as sufficient atonement.

ASQUITH URGES WITHDRAWAL OF TROOPS FROM MESOPOTAMIA

Also Moves Reduction Of Army Budget And Concentration Of Units

LLOYD GEORGE REPLIES

Defends Presence Of British In Asia Minor; Says They Prevent Civil War

(Reuter's Service)

London, June 23.—In the House of Commons today, on the vote of £16,000,000 on account for the army, Mr. Asquith moved a reduction of the amount by £1,000,000. He complained on the standing army of 338,000 men, with 167,000 employed outside the Empire.

Referring to Mesopotamia, Mr. Asquith said he adhered to his previous conviction that it would be sound policy, both on financial and political grounds, to withdraw and concentrate our forces. He estimated the cost of operations in Mesopotamia at £35,000,000 for the year.

He considered it totally inconsistent with, if not in fundamental violation of, the principles of the League of Nations covenant that considerations of oil and cotton should determine the policy of the Government.

Great Britain had no legal footing in Mesopotamia, Mr. Asquith declared, and he maintained that the mandate should be confined to parts within reach of the Persian Gulf and that Mosul should be placed under native administration.

PREMIER REPLIES

Mr. Lloyd George, replying, strongly denied that there had been [illegible] in the Government's [illegible] Mesopotamia, there would have been civil war and then, when the League of Nations said, "we have made you mandatory," Great Britain would have had to organise another expedition, costing between £150,000,000, and £200,000,000, to reconquer the country.

To say that you would only clear out of Basra until the League of Nations asked you to reconquer the country was a most preposterous suggestion, said the Premier.

Mr. Asquith seemed to forget that he was responsible for the Sykes-Picot agreement, under which the British were responsible for the whole vilayet of Bagdad.

The view, then, was that we should accept responsibility for the whole of Mesopotamia. What possible defense, the Premier asked, could be made for retirement from the Marshy end of Mesopotamia?

REGARDING MOSUL

Regarding Mosul, Mr. Lloyd George continued, we considered it at present essential and proper to the administration of Mesopotamia that Mosul should form part of it. The leading people in Mosul had petitioned the Government in favor of unity of Mosul and Mesopotamia.

The Premier said he did not doubt that the Arabs would prefer to be treated as a unit. There was the same trade and unity of race, population and religion. There was desert between them and Syria; nothing between them and Bagdad. Lord Kitchener had considered the mountains north of Mosul to be the strategic boundary of Mesopotamia.

THE OIL QUESTION

Regarding the question of oil, Mr. Lloyd George declared that no arrangements had been made with private companies. The whole oil property of Mosul would belong to the Arab state, he said subject to the pre-war arrangements of Turkey, because it was necessary to safe-guard the interests of Americans.

It was most undesirable, he declared, to make arrangements which would fetter the Arab states. It was essential that the Arabs should have the oil deposits of Mosul for the development of Mesopotamia.

The Prime Minister pointed out that the civil administration of Palestine and Mesopotamia were both paying their way. He repudiated the idea that the League of Nations might decide who should be the mandatories.

On that basis, he said it might be possible to hand over even to Germany the mandate for countries which it had cost us hundreds of millions to emancipate.

NOT PRESIDENT'S IDEA

President Wilson said the Premier, had never advocated that view. But the League could re-consider a mandate, if the terms were abused or the natives oppressed.

It was proposed to take the views of the leaders of the Arab population

SCHOOL UNVEILS WAR-HERO TABLET

Sir Everard Fraser Sounds Warning, Lest The Allies Forget Wartime Ideals

The Cathedral School war memorial tablet was unveiled yesterday at noon by Sir Everard [illegible] school, many of the old boys were present as well [illegible] was [illegible]

After the singing of the National Anthem, Sir Everard Fraser spoke of the stirring times of 1914-1918. In those years, he said, it was difficult to imagine that events would be ever forgotten, and yet we had already come to a time when there were indications that deeds and thoughts of war days seemed to be slipping into the background of memory.

He referred feelingly to the spirit of service and unselfishness which lead old boys of the school to volunteer at once, and of those who went ten had made the great sacrifice.

After the unveiling the Headmaster read the "Ode To The Fallen," written by Lourence Binyon, and then the choir sang beautifully the "Contakion for the Departed."

Dean Symons read the collects and the simple and impressive little ceremony was brought to a close by the singing of a hymn.

VISIT IS FRIENDLY

Guests Of Honor Have Amicable Chat And Leave Together

For the first time since the deadlock of the Shanghai peace conference a year ago, the two chief delegates representing the opposing factions met yesterday in public at the former German Club. The occasion was the reception tendered by over 40 Chinese local organisations in honor of the envoys, General Wang Yi-tang and Mr. Tang Shao-yi, who have recently expressed their willingness to resume the parley.

Members of the consular body, executive officers of the various societies, representatives from the administrative bureaus, leading missionaries and prominent merchants were present to congratulate the two delegates in whose hands are entrusted the mission of effecting the much desired domestic tranquility.

Because of the delicacy of the position prior to their announcement, local organisations have been inviting the delegates to their functions one at a time.

An atmosphere of genuine friendliness prevailed throughout the meeting. General Wang and Mr. Tang chatted most amicably only to be interrupted from time to time when the heads of the different bodies who were hosts at the affair were introduced to them.

TANG UNESCORTED

Mr. Tang came shortly after 4 o'clock without escorts. He mingled with the crowd already in waiting. Quarter of an hour later General Wang came with two secretaries. The band struck up as the envoys exchanged greetings and spoke familiarly to each other. The hosts thronged the spacious hall of the club and watched the ceremony with a feeling of satisfaction.

The foreign guests and the hosts were then introduced to the two delegates and refreshments were served. After an hour's friendly visit the envoys left together.

Four Prominent Turks Are Condemned To Death By Military Tribunal

("Russia" News Agency)

Moscow, June 20.—A member of the Italian delegation, to the Moscow (Soviet) conference, Mr. Bombacci, has made the following report on the labor movement in Italy.

"The Italian Socialist party, which has officially joined the Third International, is enjoying the confidence of the Italian proletariat, and is now passing through a period of growth unusual in its history.

"Its influence is chiefly due to its position in connection with the war. The growth of the revolutionary movement is also manifest among the peasants, who have organised into a union of workers numbering about a million members.

"At the peasants' Congress held recently in Bologna a resolution was carried out with regard to the socialisation of the land.

Pony, Frightened By Motor Car, Is Hurt Pawing Lamps

Driver Of Machine Is Blamed In Report Made By Police

A peculiar accident which fortunately was without serious consequences happened about 8:50 o'clock at Jinkee and Szechuen Roads when a frightened pony leaped on to the motor hood of a machine that suddenly confronted it and wrecked the headlights.

The car, which was driven by a man who gave his name as Mr. B. J. Lacon of Jardine, Matheson and Company, was reported by police at the scene to have cut the corner and to have been on the wrong side of the road at the time of the accident.

The carriage was occupied by Mr. G. L. Lubeck, 21 North Szechuen Road.

The two conveyances met suddenly but the driver of the motor car had his machine under control and stopped before a collision could occur. The pony, however, was apparently frightened by the narrow escape and reared. Striking out with its hoofs the animal demolished the motor car's lamps and slightly injured its own forelegs.

Although the matter was reported to Central Station no police action had been taken in the case last night.

THE DARDANELLES

Turning to the question of the Dardanelles and the Bosphorus, Mr. Lloyd George said it was perfectly true that we were undertaking more than we had anticipated. He believed that France and Italy would be able to contribute an equal share in the course of time.

The news from Asia Minor, he said, was much more favorable than alarmist telegrams depicted.

He did not believe it possible to make any peace in Mesopotamia, or in that quarter of the world, unless we made it clear that our policy must be carried through; namely, that of releasing the non-Turkish populations from Turkish sway.

WORKING IT OUT

Mr. Lloyd George, in conclusion, declared that we were working our way out of the difficulties, but that we must keep steady and not a farthing should be spent except to carry out our mission. Then those countries would bless us and we should have done something which added lustre to the glory of a great Empire.

Mr. Asquith's motion was defeated by 285 votes to 50.

CLEVELAND, O.—Eugene Para reported to police Monday night that $54 of his savings which he had hidden in 2 coffee pots in his restaurant, had been stolen. Last night he assured the officers that it was all a mistake.

He explained the money was in a small coffee bag inside the pot. Forgetting the money, he said he placed the pot on a steaming radiator.

The coffee boiled over and with it the $54. "I've found the bag and the money behind the radiator," he said

He arrived just as the rain began to fall and took them all to his house, where he fed them before sending them on their way home.

VERY GENEROUS

His generosity is not limited to such deeds as this, but he is continually using his money to help out worthy causes, especially church enterprises.

The son is following in his father's footsteps. He is truly a clever fellow. He is in demand not only for juggling, but is often called on by the Y.M.C.A. and other organisations to speak.

His uncle went to America and bought $4,000 worth of materials with which to aid him in the juggling business; but the young fellow put his brains together and produced things that his uncle admitted surpassed the ones he went to America and paid for.

When he was small the family was so poor that he was unable to attend school. In fact he has never spent a day in a school house. But to meet and talk with him, one would think him a well educated man. Though he has not learned the Chinese characters well, he can use the new national phonetic spelling.

He frequently contributes the earnings of a day or two to some good enterprise. At this writing he is contributng two days' earnings to the enlarging of the church in his home town.

FAMILY IS WEALTHY

Of course, the family is well off now. They have a great fruit farm that they have gradually enlarged in the past sixteen years.

In three days' entertainment for old Chang Hsun of recent fame, they earned $3,000, with which they put up a very fine modern Chinese house in their home town; and have also used their money to repair bridges and in other ways add to their local fame.

Wealth has not made them proud and unapproachable. They are the soul of hospitality and go about at home in the modest manner of the country farmer.

Says Soviet Must Acknowledge Debts

Boulogne, June 23.—On Tuesday, when the Russian question was broached at the Allied Conference, Mr. Lloyd George showed that he wished to see political relations established with Moscow, but M. Millerand firmly insisted that he would accept the re-establishment of commerical relations with Russia but that he would not recognise the Soviet Government until it had performed an act of regular government by admitting the validity of previous Russian governments in so far as the payment of foreign debts is concerned.

VERDICT OF COURT

In its decision the court said:

"The plaintiff, acting upon the defendant's suggestion, attempted to redeem the mortgage but was unable to do so. The defendant therefore must be held responsible for the value of the curios, less the amount of the mortgage which is $4,500.

"The court finds that the letter enclosing the list of values of the seven pictures, $10,000, put in by the defendant, to be in the plaintiff's handwriting and, therefore, accepts said values.

"The court further finds that the evidence of the plaintiff in regard to the two brass articles and also as to the valuation by the plaintiff of the blue vase is insufficient. Said blue vase is admitted by the defendant to be of a value of $1,000.

"Value of the articles is, therefore, found to be $11,000 and judgment is given for the plaintiff for $11,000 less $4,500, or $6,500 and costs."

Attorneys Fleming and Fischer appeared for the plaintiff and Earl B. Rose for the defendant.

IN COURT FOR YEARS

The case has been before the courts for several years and is filled with side-lights and points of interest that have held the attention of members of the bar in the Far East. The complaint filed by Mr. Tsang tells the story, his allegations having been substantiated to a large extent by the court, except as to the value heretofore quoted.

Tsang says he obtained $2,000 in May, 1913, from Zau and pledged the curios from the Manchu Palace as security. The following year he let the defendant have the famous Blue vase on a representation that it could be sold for Taels 4,000.

On November 15, 1916, the defendant wrote to him that he had re-pledged the curios to one Zung Sio-zah for $2,400 and that the vase was not yet sold. He said he had also advanced $274 for packing and freight and that the entire lot could be redeemed for $4,500, with interest from December 14, 1916.

MONEY IS TENDERED

The plaintiff said he sent $4,700 to a friend in Peking who tendered the money to the defendant. But the defendant refused to surrender the curios and in a letter, dated January 17, 1917, admitted he had sold the collection to another person but offered to redeem and restore it.

In the trial of the case Mr. Rose referred to the collection as "Peking Loot." This was not allowed to go into the record.

The plaintiff was active in politics in the Manchu days and in the reign of Yuan Shih-k'ai. He had a strenuous career in the Chinese capital and there was a long battle in the courts here as to whether there was local jurisdiction.

Paris Strikers To Go Back Soon

(Reuter's Service)

Paris, June 23.—A telegram from Ludwigshafen states that, after organising general strikes throughout the Palatinate as a protest against the arrest by the French military authorities of several Labor leaders on charges of espionage and inciting to revolt, the strike committee has notified the strikers that the cessation of work is only to last twenty-four hours.

This change of plans is said to be directly due to the firmness of the French authorities and the preparations made by the latter for the continuation of work in essential trades and in public utilities.

SAYS SHOES SELL AT DOUBLE COST

Labor Spokesman Says $3.50 Footwear Is Advanced To $8.50 To Consumer

LABOR'S SHARE 15 CENTS

Packers, Tanners, Manufacturers, Wholesalers And Retailers Accused

Washington, May 14.—Shoes cost the manufacturer less than one-half the price paid by the consumer, the rest of the cost to the buyer being taken up in profits, W. J. Lauck, former Secretary of the War Labor Board and now economist for the railway workers, stated in a report made public today.

The entire cost of making shoes for which the consumer paid $8.50 in 1917 was $3.46, he stated, adding that of a representative $3.50 increase in prices during the war on a pair of shoes, labor received only 15 cents, or less than one-twentieth of the advance.

He placed the blame for profiteering in shoes jointly on the packer, tanner, manufacturer, wholesaler and retailer, with the chief responsibility on the leather producers.

"The retailers' margin of profit," he asserted, "is by far the largest, absorbing over one-third the price, but it does not show so large an increase as the packers and tanners' profits. As the largest tanneries are indirectly a part of the big packers' varied interests, it can be said without danger of contradiction that their profiteering is very largely responsible for the high price of shoes."

"The retailer has increased his margin 102 percent or $1.82 a pair on the basis of shoes selling for $8.50. The manufacturer appears to have increased his profit less than the others, although it should be mentioned that he took his highest profits in 1916, during which year they amounted to twice the amount he took in 1914."

In 1914, Mr. Lauck contended, all the labor costs, from hide to finished shoe, absorbed less than one-sixth of the price paid by the consumer, while in 1917 this share of labor had decreased to one-ninth of the price. A wage increase of 35 percent, after 1914, he asserted, was responsible for a direct increase of merely 15 cents in a pair of shoes.

Mr. Lauck maintained that the retail margin had advanced from 35 to 42 percent in 1917 and was still soaring. "The shoe industry," he said, "is no exception to the general rule that the war made possible higher margins all along the line—that these profits have been absorbing a much larger proportion of the consumers' money than prior to the war and that this fact has resulted in enormous corporation profits and in exhorbitant prices."

The report cited the rates on earnings on investments of 237 shoe manufacturers for the years 1914-17, showing that the general level of profits in this industry advanced from approximately 15 to 25 percent during the war year. Four of the largest shoe concerns had average annual earnings of $8,400,000 for the 1913-14 period; but for the years 1916-17 they had increased to more than $10,000,000.

New York, May 15.—Leather men here seem plainly worried over the existing conditions. It now appears that immense stocks of leather are held in storage, despite the fact that only a short time ago the tanning interests and the shoe manufacturers were asserting that there was a scarcity of both hides and leather. No one knows how much leather is stored up except the tanners, and they are keeping the facts a secret.

The drop in exports of leather and the refusal of the public to pay exorbitant prices for shoes have put a stop to the efforts to hoist the prices of leather and footwear.

Veteran Member Of China Mutual Staff Is Honored

Mr. Hsu Shu-bing Presented With Handsome Watch By Mr. Burkill

The A. B. C. Club was the scene of a pleasant function yesterday at noon when Mr. Hsu Shu-bing, agent of the China Mutual Life Insurance Co., Ltd., was presented with a beautiful pearl inlaid gold watch by the company. The souvenir was given to the company representative who secured the highest amount of business during 1919.

Following the serving of the tiffin, Mr. A. W. Burkill, director of the company, made the presentation with a pleasing little speech. He welcomed the agents from outports, paid a high tribute to the work of Mr. Hsu during his 17 years of service in the company and expressed the hope that in future years the agents in other cities would receive the gift instead of a local agent.

In response, Mr. Hsu said he felt keenly the honor of the presentation, but he did not think that he had deserved the beautiful gift that was given to him. He considered it his duty to serve the company, which during the last 17 years had given him so much encouragement and assistance. He assured those present that he would treasure the watch for the rest of his life.

Among others present at the presentation were Mr. S. B. Neale, manager and actuary, Mr. S. J. Deeks, agency manager, Mr. H. Stuart, assistant actuary, Mr. T. Griffin, cashier, and agents from Hangchow, Nanking, Soochow, Shanghai and other places.

The Belles Of St. Mary's

Last night the Olympic Theater was packed to see, to hear, and to admire, 'The Belles of St. Mary's,' Jessfield. The girls started off with a real good old pantomime which they gave in English.

I asked an English lady who was sitting at the back of the hall what she thought of the show.

Her first remark was:

"Is'nt it perfectly wonderful; the elocution is perfect; I can hear every word; and the acting is so delightfully natural that no one can possibly do otherwise than enjoy it."

That spectator was a real critic. She spotted the things that count in a show.

"The Belles of St Mary's" were altogether excellent in their production of the pantomime "Ali Baba."

The little piece was staged well; the girls were taught well; they spoke well, and all was well.

For this happy state of affairs Miss Pott, Miss Graves and Miss Cooper are to be congratulated. Each lady had her own particular department to look after, and each dove-tailed so harmoniously that the result was an unqualified success.

See the performance on Monday next at three o'clock in the afternoon. The kiddies will revel in it, and they will have the opportunity of seeing what Chinese girls can do.

The interval followed the English play and then came more revelations. Young China portrayed itself.

If the Western World can play jazz, why so can the Orient. If America can produce a Dempsey, why so can the Orient. If the Continent can produce a Malini, why so can China.

Listen! Or rather read! That Chinese orchestra that comes from St. John's University can play flutes, they can manipulate banjos; they can fiddle about with fiddles; they can one-step on the one-string violin. They can play stuff that gives as much pleasure as the jazziest jazz.

Then a group of women athletes gave a wonderful turn. It is a sign of the times; these ladies did stunts that Sandow is asking big money to teach in London.

They twirled swords around so well that any of the three Musketeers would have been proud to imitate; they wrestled like Hackenchmidt; they boxed like a Carpentier; they looked like Lina Cavalieri.

Young China is awake. The boys are going ahead at a great pace, but they cannot keep up with the ladies.

"The Belles of St. Mary's" put up a show last evening that sent everyone away happy.

They are going to do the same on Monday. Go and see them. Besides enjoying a fine entertainment you will also be laying out three dollars in a big cause, the building of a large auditorium for the ladies of Young China in Brennan Road.

NEW BALL CLUB TO MAKE FIRST SHOWING HERE

Initial Appearance Of The International Club Is Drawing Card

PROMISE GREAT SPORT

Two Local Teams Will Be Treat For Fans Who Follow Diamond

The newly organised International Baseball Club will make its initial appearance before Shanghai fans on Sunday when its members will cross bats with the Shanghai Champions.

The new team has been handicapped in practise because of inclement weather and their teamwork has not been perfected as yet, but they have a promising aggregation and are expected to give a good account of themselves. They promise a real game of baseball, at least, to give the best they have in stock under existing conditions, and bid for public favor on the ground that the settlement should have two No. 1 teams in order to insure the best interests of the American National sport.

Mr. H. Robert Naftsky and Mr. Richard Komaroff are the organisers of the new team and are using all their energy in making the club a real contender in Shanghai baseball.

Mr. Kohlan has been appointed field captain and will keep the boys on tip-toe every minute.

The new club's line-up for Sunday's game is announced as follows:

Main, rf; Sperry, rf; Gollop, lf; Ellerdessen, 3b; Tuttleman, ss; McLachlan, 2b; Stovall, 1b; Kohlan, c; Bullet Miller, p.

Stovall has been loaned to the new team by the Champions and although his "whip" is not at its best just now he said last night that he thought he could hold down the initial sack for the game. Other members of the club are well known in baseball circles here and the fans will be interested in what promises to be the first real tussle the Champions have had this season.

England's Greatest Half-Miler

B. C. D. Rudd, of Oxford University, who is said to be the greatest half-miler ever developed in England, snapped on the track at Franklin Field, Philadelphia. Rudd is captain of the Oxford-Cambridge relay team, which recently won the two-mile relay championship at the University of Pennsylvania meet at Franklin Field, in the record time of 7:50 2-5, the previous best being 7:53. Rudd gave a brilliant display in the last half mile of the relay race, increasing his team's advantage of 10 yards at the end of the the third leg to a winning margin of 40 yards. The English team was composed of W. G. Tatham, H. B. Stallard, W. R. Milligan and B. C. D. Rudd.

BASEBALL TODAY WHEN BOLSHEVIKI ATTACK REGULARS

Star Players Of Community Are To Meet Here In Hot Contest

LINE-UPS ARE STRONG

Hitting Strength Believed To Be Well Balanced In Organisations

Shanghai fans are promised a real baseball game this afternoon beginning at 3:30 o'clock, on the Recreation Grounds, when the "Bolsheviki" make their bow to the public and take on the Regulars in a contest.

The teams are believed to be about equal in hitting strength and, although the new organisation has not had the opportunity of perfecting its teamwork, it is the opinion of Manager Tinkham that the aggregation will make a creditable showing and that the fans will see something worth while.

The line-ups are:

Bolsheviki: Reid, c; Hopkins, 1b; Merrill, 2b; Giauque, ss; Pung, 3b; Porterfield Rugh, Tinkham and Terry, p; Viking, Wallace and Proseus, outfielders.

Regulars: Holman, c; Wilhoit, 1b; Woods, 2b; Bills, ss; Ladd, 3b; Claire and Gill, p; Smith, Lillie, Stovall, outfielders.

Despite the weather the Bolshevists haven't been killed off, declares Manager Tinkham, and several good workouts were held this week.

There are old timers, new men and school boys in the line-up; and it is the confident expectation of the crowd who are promoting another team to stimulate interest in the American pastime that they will be able to produce an aggregation of which none need be ashamed.

It is pointed out that the Regulars line-up has been left practically intact, and that the object is to give competition worth while in order to stimulate interest in the sport.

Mr. Tinkham has asked that it be stated as coming from him direct, that all members of the club will please appear on the field promptly this afternoon, as he has been unable to reach all of them with a personal notification.

Rugh and Viking are American School boys; Pung, Terry, Wallace and Prosens are new men but the other members of the Bolsheviki are well known to the Shanghai baseball fans.

Tokio Note Says Soviet-Partisan Pact Is Arranged

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Tokio, June 25.—The Foreign Office issued a statement today, referring to a communication from the Soviet Press Bureau, which had just been received in Tokio, stating that the Nikolaevsk Partisans were closely affiliated with the Soviet Government.

After declaring that the Soviet reports of Japanese atrocities at Vladivostok and Nikolaevsk, contained in the communication, carry their own refutation, the statement concludes:

"What is of great significance about Bolshevik propaganda is this—that the Bolshevik Government in Siberia, which first denied relationship with the Partisans, thus excusing themselves from responsibility, now openly identify themselves with the Partisans, thus giving an entirely new complexion to the whole question."

Police And Customs Cricket Teams Will Play Match At 2 p.m.

Urges China Trade

Seattle, June 10.—Backing his assertions with a rushing torrent of facts and figures, Julean Arnold, commercial attache at Peking and resident of China eighteen years, declared that it is the duty of Seattle to lead in the work of rousing the United States to the importance of future trade with China. Mr. Arnold spoke at the Members' Council in the Masonic Club rooms last week.

No city is so happily located for business with Asia as Seattle, Mr. Arnold said. He urged that delegates from this city go to the Foreign Trade convention at San Francisco determined to force upon the attention of delegates from the East the importance of centering on the commercial possibilities of the Pacific.

Surrounded by a big percentage of the world's population and vast undeveloped resources, the Pacific ocean is the arena of the world commerce of the future, Mr. Arnold asserted. An American owned merchant marine is essential to success in foreign trade, the speaker declared.

American merchants are especially favored in China. The Chinese want to learn American methods and like to do business with Americans, Mr. Arnold told his audience. He advised business men to get their trade mark before the vast population of China, which is just awakening to trade opportunities.

There are no shirkers in China, Mr. Arnold said. Everybody wants to work. China has sufficient coal to supply the world at the present rate of consumption for the next thousand years. Iron exists in abundance and coupled with the native desire for industry, the nation is destined to see a great era of industrial development.

Mr. Arnold emphasised the importance of industrial development in Seattle as outlined by members of the Industrial bureau who spoke at the luncheon. Commerce with China can play a big part in this development, he declared.

Following his whirlwind speech, Mr. Arnold was greeted with an enthusiastic ovation and the Chinese sign "thumbs up" signifying "the best ever."

DECLARES BRITAIN ALMOST NORMAL

Major Evelyn Wrench Says Americans Have Wrong Impression

WELCOME AWAITS VISITOR

Tells That Food Is Cheaper And More Plentiful In Britain

New York, May 15.—Major Evelyn Wrench, British head of the Overseas Club, speaking last night at the dinner of the Association of Foreign Press Correspondents in the Vanderbilt Hotel, at which he was the guest of honor, said that he was surprised to find existing here an erroneous impression about present conditions in England. People in the United States had the idea that England was short of food, that strikes were general, and that the ranks of labor were more or less revolutionary, he said.

"The facts are that normal conditions have been very largely restored in England, that food is plentiful and even cheaper in that country, while labor is fully occupied at wages far in advance of the pre-war scale," he declared. "While the London hotels are unusually crowded at the present time, we are expecting to welcome a multitude of American visitors this season, and they can be assured that every effort will be made to take care of them.

"By means of the recently established Overseas Visitors' Bureau and other associations plans have been made to provide accommodations in private houses and elsewhere for all who are unable to find quarters at the big hotels. Never before has there been such a widespread desire in England to welcome visiting Americans. Tourists from this country who visit England this season will find that London has regained much of the life of pre-war times, and for those who are in search of recreation there will be abundant opportunities for social enjoyment."

Alluding to the League of Nations, Major Wrench declared that unless the rank and file of the people of the United States were for the league there was no need of leaving it on parchment. In regard to the Irish question he said in part:

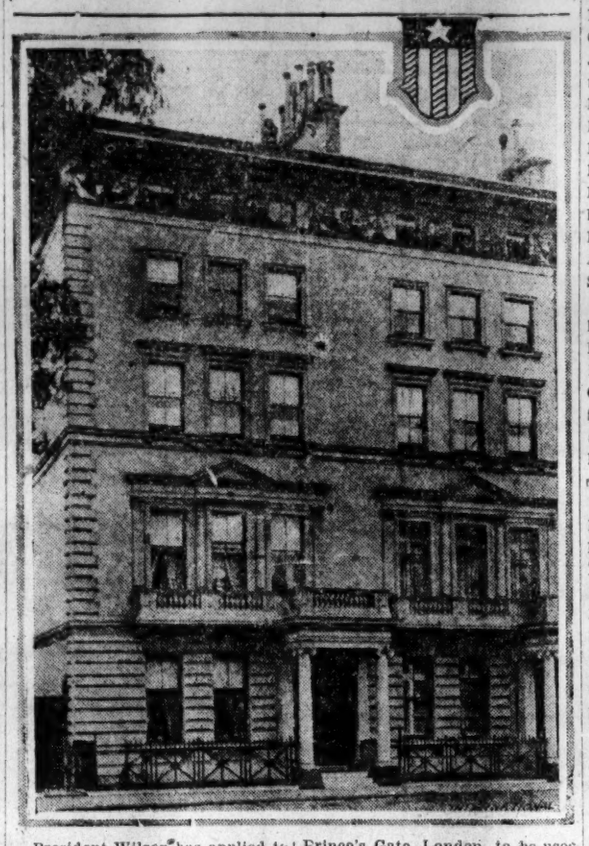
In England we are desperately anxious to solve the Irish question. The rank and file of all parties in England want to give any kind of self-government, provided she remains in the United Kingdom. The home rule bill now before Parliament, I am sure will pass.

Ulster has accepted it and that is a great step forward. In the British Isles we are drifting toward a modified form of civil war and all clear-minded Englishmen are trying to do all in their power to avert it. A great deal is talked about the Irish Republic. Ireland dominates the Atlantic seaboard of Scotland, England and Wales from a strategic standpoint, and the average electors in England think back to the Easter rebellion of 1916. I can feel for the elector, even though I am half Irish, when they think of this time in discussing the Irish question.

"There is a reign of terror in Ireland because the Sinn Feiners have the upper hand and the average fair Irishman is afraid to speak. The English Government does not want tanks, aeroplanes or soldiers in Ireland, but in face of the present crisis they are needed. Ulster represents very important business interests and these interests are not to be overlooked."

Maurice Cazanove, French High Commissioner, said that the views expressed by Major Wrench about the impressions prevailing here of conditions in England might apply equally as well to France. He said that while his country was suffering terribly from the war it was returning to normal rapidly.

J. P. Morgan's Home In London Offered To United States



President Wilson has applied to Congress for authority to accept as a gift to the United States the home of J. P. Morgan at No. 13 Prince's Gate, London, to be used as a permanent Embassy. There were originally two houses, and they were consolidated by the elder Morgan in 1908.

Paris Milliners Scoff At $5,000 U.S. Hat

Some Call It A Bluff, Others Assert It Must Be Made Of Dollars

Paris, May 11.—The $5,000 hat which the American milliners offered Mme. Deschanel, wife of the President of the French Republic, and which the President refused to accept, has become the subject of lively controversy among the Paris milliners. What is it made of, this wonderful hat, they demand. No hat ever made in Paris cost half as much.

Any price above $500 is quite exceptional here, and expert opinion has come to the conclusion that the American hat must be trimmed with diamonds and pearls and made of precious metals. Here are some of the opinions of the foremost houses:

At Reboux's it was said that there must be a mistake in the number of zeros.

Georgette declared that even if covered with bird of paradise plumes and aigrettes it could not cost a tenth of the price.

"I believe," she said, "that it must be trimmed with real pearls, dollars and precious stones, but I really cannot judge what the effect will be like."

A skyscraper of aigrettes, was the suggestion made by Maria Guy. The most expensive hats she had ever made cost from $400 to $600, and to make one worth $5,000, she declared, she would have to use emeralds.

Mme. Lewis Bluntain gave it as her opinion that the whole business was a bluff, and Louise Mansy lamented that a photograph of the famous hat was not available. She would have loved to see it. With 600 aigrettes, she said, she could make a hat for a nouvelle riche which would cost more than $400, but she could not conceive how materials could be piled on the head which would equal such a fortune as $5,000.

No one here really believes in the hat or its price. Least of all do the milliners believe in its good taste. If it ever reaches this side of the Atlantic they will certainly flock to see it.

Children Cry for Fletcher's
CASTORIA

Fletcher's Castoria is particularly a preparation for Infants and Children made agreeable to the taste, acceptable to the stomach and pleasant in its action. It has been in use for over thirty years and has always been one of the most highly esteemed of all cathartic preparations. It has one great advantage over other preparations of its kind in that while it opens the organs readily and completely, it does not have a tendency to produce subsequent constipation so much to be dreaded.

It was only after years of research in the fields of herbs and roots for a combination of purely vegetable matter that would have all the virtues of Castor Oil, without its disagreeable, nauseating properties, especially when used for infants or children, that the formula used in Fletcher's Castoria was found, and which for over 30 years has proven its worth. Try it.

Save the Babies.

Infantry mortality is something frightful. We can hardly realise that of all the children born in civilised countries, twenty-two per cent., or nearly one quarter die before they reach one year, thirty-seven per cent., or more than one-third, before they are five, and one half before they are fifteen! We do not hesitate to say that a timely use of Castoria would save many of these precious lives. Neither do we hesitate to say that many of these infantile deaths are occasioned by the use of narcotic preparations. Drops, tinctures and soothing syrups sold for children's complaints contain more or less opium or morphine. They are, in considerable quantities, deadly poisons. In any quantity, they stupefy, retard circulation and lead to congestion, sickness, death. To avoid any possibility of giving your child opiates, or narcotics of any kind, keep Fletcher's Castoria in the house, and Save the Babies.

Cotton Market

In their report dated June 26, Messrs. J. Spunt and Co. write as follows:

China Cotton.—There is nothing fresh to report since our last circular was issued prices remain steady and a fair amount of business is reported both in Old and New Crop Cotton at ruling rates. The New Crop report both in China and India is reported to be progressing favorably and while there is no fresh news to hand from America, the decline in New York rates would indicate an improvement in the Crop situation.

The Yarn situation is still very active and prices have firmed up some Tls. 10.00 per bale, genuine inquiries coming from different parts of the country. Japanese spinners are reported to be contemplating a reduction of their output by 50 percent which ought to materially help the situation. Taking a general survey of the position we feel assured that there is no reason to be panicky over the outlook, providing the mills are getting themselves provided with Cotton for their future requirements we do not see why handsome results should not yet be shown by them. Tone of the market Steady.

Messrs. A. B. Rosenfeld and Son write as follows in their report dated June 26:

China Cotton.—During the past week there has been no change in the fundamental conditions of the market. Fluctuations were within narrow limits and these were influenced from day to day by the weather map with a steady tendency at the close of the week.

Aside from the speculative features the chief developments of the week were the additional heavy rains in Kiangsu and Chekiang Provinces, also along the Valley. Reports from the other sections of the cotton belt are that the plants are growing nicely and the outlook so far is good.

Regarding the present prospect of the crop, with the exception of scattered localities in the Chihli and Shantung Provinces, the outlook is almost "brilliant." Whatever the ultimate outturn may be, we consider that the present indication is for a large crop and if there is no crop disaster, we will see low prices for cotton this coming fall. We should like to mention here that the latest advices from Japan inform us that the Mill Owners' Association are contemplating working the Mills on half time for a period of probably six months. Should this plan be carried out and considering the fact of the heavy unsold stocks of Indian cotton coupled with favorable weather reports received from India, particularly from the Berar districts, lower prices for cotton will be the pivot for the coming season.

Yarn.—As was to be expected we are glad to chronicle the firm position of the Yarn market during the past week both for new business and for deliveries of the China product. Prices advanced from ten to twelve taels during the interval and at the close the tendency was strong. Considering conditions generally and the weakness of "Exchange" in particular, the position of the China product is as healthy as it was some three months back, we therefore cannot see how the price of Chinese yarn can decline and if there is a change it will be towards improvement.

Latest advices from Japan which we consider of interest to the trade is here appended:

"Shipments of Indian cotton since last November up to the end of May aggregate 1,000,000 bales, most of which have not yet been consumed and lie accumulating in Kwanto and Kwansai Districts. Schemes are now on foot among spinning companies for re-exporting raw cotton to China and Europe as they are in great need of funds in consequence of having been forced by the brokers to reduce output. A contract for 50,000 bales is reported as already having been made with a European buyer."

The Democratic Convention

IN America today all eyes are turned towards the Golden West. For in San Francisco next Monday the Democratic National Convention will be called to order. This great assemblage of the leaders of the Democratic Party will nominate a candidate to run against Senator Warren G. Harding, standard-bearer of the Republican party, for the Presidency. Also it will promulgate a party platform, as the Republican Party already has done, setting forth its views on the issues of the day.

Of paramount importance in this platform, will be the plank dealing with the League of Nations and the Treaty of Peace. President Wilson and his followers will demand that the party give full indorsement to the President's work at Paris by favoring the League and the Treaty without amendment or reservation. Mr. Bryan and his adherents will favor the League and the Treaty with reservations somewhat along the lines proposed by Senator Lodge. These reservations, it will be remembered, although first proposed by the Republicans in the Senate, were finally abandoned by them in the heat of the Chicago Convention and the Republicans now favor the making of a separate peace with Germany and the substitution of an International Court of Justice for the League of Nations.

Aside from this problem, the Democrats will have to face a number of knotty issues. It is certain for instance that the Irish Democrats will make a determined effort to have incorporated in the platform a declaration in favor of the Irish Republic. The Labor question and the public ownership of national utilities, such as the railroads and telegraphs, also promise to produce close fights.

And inasmuch as the convention is being held in California, there is strong likelihood of an attempt being made to drive through a plank committing the Democratic Party to a definite stand on the Japanese immigration crisis. On the whole, the convention promises to be even more interesting than the Republican convention proved to be.

On the question of candidates, the Democrats now appear to be as much at sea as the Republicans were. In the first place the Democratic Convention requires a vote of two-thirds of the accredited delegates to nominate a presidential candidate, whereas the Republicans require only a majority. If the Republican rule had prevailed in the Democratic convention of 1912 Champ Clark would have been nominated instead of Woodrow Wilson.

As to the Democratic material offering, the voters, so far as their views have been made known through the medium of The Literary Digest's straw vote, have no overwhelming favorite, nor have the aspirants themselves made any real fight for votes in the state primaries. William G. McAdoo led The Digest's poll, according to the latest figures we have, with 99,000 votes. But now he has withdrawn from the race and announced that his decision is irrevocable. This may mean that President Wilson intends to offer himself for a third term, or it may mean that the President has picked some man whom he prefers to McAdoo.

We do not think that the nomination will go to Wilson, even if he decides to offer himself for a third term. His age, his grave illness and the prejudice against third terms all count against him. At that the President was running second in The Digest's poll, with 64,400 votes, while Gov. Edwards of New Jersey, who is against prohibition, was third with 60,000. Of the others, Bryan had 45,000, Cox, Governor of Ohio, 31,500, Champ Clark, who has declared that he will not run, 21,500, Attorney General Palmer 18,600 and Vice-President Marshall 11,300.

The probability that the nomination will go to a "dark horse" is therefore strong. In this connection a powerful effort is now being made in behalf of John W. Davis, of West Virginia, the present Ambassador to the Court of St. James. This fight is being led by The New York Times, which in its issue of Sunday, May 23, under the caption "A Great Democrat" advocated, in a three-column editorial, the nomination of Mr. Davis. It referred to him as "a great man, a great American, a great Democrat" and concluded its review of his career by saying: "The Democratic Party would immensely strengthen itself in the confidence of the country by giving its nomination to a man of his mental stature, his statesmanlike amplitude and qualification."

This from The Times, which has been a pillar of support to President Wilson, indicates that there had been a change in the Democratic outlook even as there had been a change in the Republican outlook caused by the rift in that party. So, if you are inclined to back a "dark horse," you might put a bet down on Davis.

HOW SOON CAN GERMANY COME BACK?

Despite Whining Over Peace Terms, Active Propaganda Of Quick Recovery Is Under Way—Menace Of Industrial Prussianism

BY CHARLES J. ROSEBAULT
(New York Times)

At the moment nothing would seem less likely than that the Germany of pre-war times should reappear among the nations. Like Samson shorn of his locks, she would appear to be but the sport of those who once looked upon her with fear, if not respect. Even the little Balkans mock at her. But—remember that Samson grew long hair again and made quite a mess of his enemies. There is no particular comfort in the fact that he went down with them.

At first glance there would seem to be no reason to expect a rehabilitation of Germany within the time of most of us; but a little deeper inquiry will cause the dispassionate judge to hesitate. In fact, drawing up a trustworthy balance sheet for what remains of the German Empire would tax the ingenuity of our best economists, simple as it seems.

There is no difficulty on the debt side. Gone are the shipping, the iron mines, the coal, the colonies, large stretches of territory with their industrious inhabitants; there is woeful lack of food and raw materials; an unheardof depreciation of the mark; vast debts to be paid in the gold which is not procurable; a confused and depressing present, an uncertain future. One might easily add to the list.

It is the assets and doubtful items which must give us pause. Under assets is included propaganda. During the war German propaganda was not always an asset, to be sure. Sometimes it proved quite the contrary. Not infrequently it was so foolish that we finally came to regard it as an asset on our side. The zu Reventlows and their allies, the German diplomats, put a lot of ginger into our game. They did much to convert some pro-Germans and even more to silence others. And yet it won't do to ignore German propaganda in considering the assets of Germany today. It was no slight weapon in the war for commercial supremacy which Germany waged so successfully before she blew up with reckless arrogance. It is likely to be most useful now if it is controlled with any degree of cleverness. It looks as if it was being well handled at the moment.

'COME BACK' PROPAGANDA

Take this talk, for instance, of Germany's "coming back" before some of the Allies do. That is made to appear as news or comment every now and then. On the surface it appears ridiculous. But it persists. It is sandwiched in between reports of Spartacist rebellions and demands for revision of the Versailles treaty. It is just as likely to appear in the same column with an interview with a statesman or economist of reputation demonstrating scientifically that Germany is sliding down into the abyss—because of the strangling allied terms of peace.

It is difficult to compose these opposing theories until we analyse them and discover the motive for each. There is no mystery about the effort to procure amelioration of the terms of peace. Even in the countries of the Allies, not excluding France, there is a considerable body of opinion which favors a revision here or there, some based on humanitarian (or sentimental, as one may view it) considerations, more on the practical supposition that insistence upon the letter of the bond may defeat the debt through crushing the debtor. From the German point of view it is of the utmost importance to bolster up this view in the allied countries so long as there remains a chance to force the Supreme Council to review the treaty. It heads the list of possible escapes from the burdens which weigh upon the nation. It so far overshadows every other avenue to improvement that it must be given full scope regardless of its effect upon the others.

It has, too, the advantage of vraisemblance. The lack of food and raw materials, the malnutrition of a large part of the population, so that the efficiency of many workers has been seriously affected, is not to be doubted. These conditions existed when the armistice was arranged, and they have grown worse in many of the industrial centers. All the evidence from every source agrees here. Germany must be helped with food and certain raw materials.

This is where the other propaganda begins. Very few of the leaders in Germany, whatever their party, place much reliance upon the pity or the good-will of the world. Talk of a League of Nations, in which even Germany is to have a voice, and references to the German people as distinguished from those who led them into the assault upon the peace of the world, stirs few bosoms in the Wilhelmstrasse or among the financiers or industrialists—not to mention the old-time statesmen. To the extent that Germany is needed in the reconstruction of a world floundering at the edge of chaos, and no further, is help to be procured, in the sober judgment of those who have, or hope to have, the management of the affairs of the nation. There was a time, shortly after the Kaiser ran away, when some of the leaders among the Social Democrats, made hopeful by the world talk of the Fourteen Points, thought that Germany might be treated as a Prodigal Son; but even they long ago realised that Stern Justice occupied the seat of control.

APPEAL TO PROFITEERS

It remains, therefore, to convince those from whom aid must be procured through material arguments alone. Failing a satisfactory revision of the Peace Treaty, which is admittedly dubious, there is the appeal to the profiteers of the world. One of the recognised axioms of speculation everywhere is that when conditions are clearly desperate then they must improve. All that the daring speculator demands before backing this chance is a reasonable certainty that the foundations will not disappear altogether; hence this talk about a German revival in advance of recuperation in the other European countries seriously affected by the war.

This propaganda, for it is no less, began more than a year ago. I heard it in Berlin in April of 1919. A leading lawyer of the Prussian capital launched it at a dinner at which a number of influential journalists and others were present. He put it more frankly than I have heard it since. He said: "We will be on our feet before France is." France has been kept in the background in recent repetitions of this prediction, but the disguise has only been sufficient to save the prophets from the charge of willful attack upon that country. That France was, however, the one aimed at has been shown by the form now adopted. "Belgium," said Irving T. Bush to an interviewer, when he returned to this country in March, "will be the first country on the Continent to recover from the war, and Germany will be the second." Mr. Bush was not alone in this conviction. It has been asserted by many travelers. It has been published in England and in the neutral countries. But it began with the Germans. What was their object? Simply to induce the speculators of the world to lend their money to Germany rather than to France.

The profit to be made by investment in Germany, whose mark is quoted at only a twentieth of the normal value, is naturally much greater than what can be got in France, whose monetary unit has depreciated only to a little less than a third. It is only a question of comparative safety.

INTERNATIONAL REACTIONS

It does not follow that keen observers like Mr. Bush may not be justified in their predictions. The present situation is not so simple that one may declare offhand that Germany is certain to be behind France in recovery. With all of Germany's losses and burdens she has no devastated districts to bring back to industrial activity, no ruined homes to rebuild. To make French reparation possible Germany must first be helped to produce, and once she is put in that position the future is any man's guess. The whole of Europe was in competition with Germany before and unable to resist the steady progress of German commercial predominance. It remains to be seen whether allied resistance can be organised and maintained successfully over a period of years.

Americans, who are the most persistent idealists in the world, and likewise the poorest haters, are nevertheless likely to withstand a rapprochement with Germany longer than any other people. Frenchmen, Italians and Englishmen were on the edge of Germany waiting to open up business relations with the hated enemy long before any American thought of letting up on him. The so-called Dollar Yankee is apparently the only person who allows sentiment to interfere with business. The Frenchman will never cease hating the German, and Paris will not be a healthy playground for the German profiteer for many a day, but business is being done and will grow steadily between the two countries. Two thoroughly sophisticated peoples will not stop making money even though they continue to make faces at each other.

As France has been at no pains to disguise her animosity, so Germany is in no doubt as to the facts. France is her chief and relentless foe. England, too busy with her own problems to have overmuch time for dwelling upon an affair settled pretty much to her liking, might be won over to a semi-contemptuous indulgence—at least, until she found Germany treading again upon her commercial toes. Italy has openly declared her willingness to be friendly once more. Therefore has opinion throughout Germany crystallised that France alone stands in the way of German rehabilitation, with the result that the average German is secretly cultivating a new hymn of hate. But, curiously enough, many Germans who count do not join in this movement.

"What we did to France," said my Berlin lawyer, "cannot be made good in a century. I know, for I was there."

His was the attitude of the fighter who has done his opponent dirt and expects to have to pay for it, but secretly nourishes the satisfaction of knowing that the scars he produced are permanent.

HOW THE PLEA WORKS

He is of the type that means to get Germany back on her feet. To propaganda he adds two other assets whose value the outsider is not qualified to assess. One is the German's love of order and convention. The other is the German workman's pride in his work. The latter was not in evidence after the war and there is considerable divergence in the testimony on this point now. At the dinner I mentioned it was admitted that unrest and a lack of raw materials had affected the workman's habit of labor, but this was regarded as ephemeral. In twenty-five years, it was agreed, Germany would be again leading the nations commercially.

That this sort of talk is not without influence is proved by such an incident as the investment of 25,000,000 marks of American capital in a single German enterprise—the German General Electric Company—announced only a few days ago. The purchase of German marks and, even more, the investment in German municipal bonds, which has been going on in this country for a long time, is sufficient evidence that there is some faith even in America in the German revival. Mr. Bush asserted that he had motored over 300 miles of German territory and had stopped at Frankfort and other cities in and out of the occupied zones. He had been informed that there was no merchandise in Germany, but he found the warehouses packed with it. Everywhere the people went about their work "in a quiet, determined manner."

An English writer for the Fortnightly Review, certainly one of the most dependable publications of the world, agreed with Mr. Bush. He was fresh from being mobbed at Halle, which influenced his attitude toward Germans in general none too pleasantly, but the fact which impressed him more than any other in his ride from Cologne into the unoccupied country was the volume of smoke pouring from countless factory chimneys. An American economist sent to Germany by one of our leading financial institutions six months ago returned with the conviction that Germany would emerge from her difficulties.

THE ENGLISH VIEW

Per contra, another English authority has it, that Germany is rapidly being strangled. The cause is not the Peace Treaty nor the intransigeance of France, but the voluntary dispersal of the material assets of the country through export and sale to foreign commercial invaders. These sales, it is maintained, being made for marks at valuations which do not compensate for the depreciation of the mark outside the country, it will be impossible to replace the materials at anything like the same cost when it is necessary to import them.

Recently, I was visited by a Swiss merchant who came directly from a tour of Southern and Central Germany. His outstanding reaction was amazement at the extravagance he had witnessed everywhere. It was noticeable in all classes. As he spoke the language fluently and had many acquaintances in the town he visited he was able to discuss the situation freely. Everywhere he was told that formerly frugal German had become a spendthrift because he was convinced that it would be folly to continue to accumulate money, that he had better enjoy what he had, for he would not be allowed to continue in possession long. Better that he should use it for a last fling than to see it go to the conquerors or to be wasted by an incompetent Government, mad with an obsession to cure the ills of the country by an orgy of taxation which would only destroy all initiative and enterprise. Consequently the restaurants, the cafes, the theaters and the gambling hells were packed with a feverish, hysterical crowd, which indulged every appetite regardless of cost.

So it is possible to get the most contradictory views of the Germany that is at the moment, all of which are undoubtedly justified by the facts. That is, the chaos which prevailed after the revolution has not been dissipated after a year of desperate effort by the present Government. The issue is in the lap of the gods, and one observer's guess at the outcome would seem to be as good as another's. One fact is, however, beyond dispute. The strong practical men of Germany, those who were the prime movers in her success before the war, the going to keep on fighting for her rehabilitation and even for her recovery of her former primacy in commerce and industry.

The unfortunate Ballin, head of the Hamburg-American Line, who committed suicide when the mad Kaiser refused to heed his counsel, was representative of them. Ballin was against the war originally, did what he could for the country when it arrived, and tried his best to convince the Kaiser to make peace when the outcome was inevitable. The Ballins of today include industrialists, financiers, lawyers and journalists, but practically no militarists. They have put aside all thought of war and have little patience with those who talk of revanche. Their policy is steady, determined jockeying for a position which will insure recuperation. Their conviction is that once Germans have enough to eat and the raw materials to work with no power can hold them back for long.

NEW PRUSSIAN MENACE

Germany cannot be crushed, is the slogan. Once normal conditions are established in industry these people mean to force the pace beyond anything that has yet been known. The whole world will have to work then or succumb to the new Prussian colossus of industry.

There is where the new Prussian menace will come. The conquerors are indulging in dreams or less labor and more luxury, while the conquered are girding their loins for superhuman effort. In the meantime the editors of Berlin are sitting in weekly council with the spokesmen of the Government and leaders of industry and finance, as they have been for more than a year. Quarrel as they may about internal politics, they are seeking to present a single front to the world.

It is all a question whether Germany can get a good start. When the workmen can eat normally those Germans who have the will to power will find the way to inspire the masses with the will to work—if it does not exist already. Then will come the supreme test of the theory that hatred of Germany in some of the chief markets of the world will resist the invasion of cheap German wares. Even if there is a short interval before the assault of low prices beats down the walls of prejudice, it will not be left unutilised. Russia, the Balkans and the East will supply ample markets for some time. Nor will the new States—including those created by the Allies—be neglected. In fact, it is there that some of the most efficient German propaganda is at work even now.

In Munich I met a noble member of the Foreign Service under the old Bavarian monarchy, who had been invited by one of the little States carved out of Russia to help organise and launch its Government. Administration has been a profession in Germany. The Mayor of Dresden or Frankfort, or a Secretray in the Foreign Office had to be more than a number of the privileged classes. He had to be a graduate of an institution where administration was taught as law, medicine or archaeology are taught in the universities. He had also to show development through experience in minor activities. Politics, Government favor and other pulls might be of use, but they were all secondary.

So the German administrator has had a reputation throughout the continent. Now many of them are being utilised to help the untrained new Governments get under way. In Munich my acquaintance was going to be, for a time at least, almost a dictator. He is the perfect reactionary; believes in keeping the masses in leading strings and that the old Germany of caste, privilege and the iron hand was the model for all Governments. He will leave no effort untried to advance Germany's interests. Many like him will be at work throughout the many little States developed out of the doctrine of self-determination. They will be in positions of influence and will rebuild the legend of German efficiency. It still exists in some of the neutral countries. It will help in the next move for German supremacy.

Englishmen Set A New Relay Race Record

(Literary Digest)

American Relay Teams will have to be on their p's and q's for the Olympic races in Belgium in August, when they will meet again their victorious English rivals, the Oxford-Cambridge quartet. In the international field-events held in Philadelphia in early May, the Britishers outdistanced the home teams in the two-mile relay race, and set a new world's record Their time for the distance, 7 minutes, 50 2/5 seconds, clipped 2 3/5 seconds from the mark established in 1910 by F. Riley, J. Bromilow, Mel Sheppard, and Abe Kiviat, who ran under the colors of the Irish-American Athletic Club. The British relay team in the Philadelphia meet was made up of W. G. Tatham, H. B. Stallard, W. R. Milligan, and B. G. D. Rudd, captain. It was Stallard who gained the lead after taking the baton from Tatham, running in third place in the first half-mile, and thereafter the visitors gained until, at the finish, Captain Rudd was thirty yards ahead of Yates, the hope of Illinois. Franklin Field was crowded with thirty thousand spectators, including members from the British Embassy. When it was announced that the visitors had broken the world's record, they were lustily cheered in true sportsman's style. The race is aptly described by William Hennigan, one of the sports writers of the New York World:

The victory of the Oxford-Cambridge team can be told in a few words. It was by far the best team in the race, and at the finish Rudd, captain of the English team, had a good thirty yards over Yates, of Illinois, who finished second.

Following Yates was game little Earl Eby, the star of the Penn team. Every one in the crowd of thirty thousand pinned their hopes on Eby. The blond-haired youngster, try as he might, could not overtake the fast-flying Rudd, who started with at least a twenty-five yard advantage over the Penn star. Rudd's time for the half was 1 minute 54 3/5 seconds, and Eby's 1 minute and 56 4/5 seconds.

The race was lacking in thrills. In the last international two-mile race in 1914, Col. Arnold N. Strode Jackson, running as anchor for Oxford-Cambridge, just barely beat Wallace McCurdy, of Penn, in one of the greatest finishes ever seen. There was no such finish today. The race was over just as soon as Rudd, who is no doubt a wonderful runner, snatched the baton from Milligan.

Only once during the race did America show to advantage. This was in the first half. Eight teams competed, and as the field broke, R. B. Davidson, of Cornell, broke in front, with Tatham, of Oxford-Cambridge, in the rear.

The Cornell man cut out a fast pace and at the end of the half-mile was a good five yards in front of Spink, of the Illinois team, who was moving rapidly over the dirt. Tatham was in third place when he handed the baton to Stallard.

Stallard worked his legs fast and rounding the turn was up with the leaders. As he passed the members of the British Embassy, he uncovered a sprint that carried him quickly to the front. That was the turning-point of the race. That was where the Englishmen's victory began.

Stallard continued his fast running and gradually he drew away from the other runners. At the end of his half-mile he was leading Stanton, of Cornell, by fifteen yards. Illinois was in third place and E. Shields, of Penn, fourth.

Milligan took the baton from Stallard and away he went. As he did so, Stallard, with his strength and stamina done, sank to the ground. He was picked up by Jackson.

Milligan ran even faster than Stallard, and with every bound he made victory for America become more remote. On his first lap he had opened up a gap of twenty-five yards on Henry, of Illinois. Cornell was running third and Penn still fourth.

As the field started on its second lap the anchor men took their places. Eby obviously was nervous. In fact, his muscles twitched as the runners sped around the track. He knew that the great crowd expected him to overtake the English team. Once he glanced over his shoulder to see where Brown, the Penn man, was. One look was enough to convince the runner that only a superhuman effort on his part would snatch victory from the jaws of defeat.

Rudd, who had the inside position, waited patiently for Milligan. As the latter neared the line Rudd grabbed the baton with his left hand. His stride was smooth and his pace fast. He was not exerting himself and it could easily be seen that he was saving his strength and speed for the final lap.

He was a good distance in front when Eby started. In between the Englishmen and the Penn runners were Yates, of Illinois, and a Cornell runner. But the thirty thousand pairs of eyes were focused only on Eby. The Penn runner cut loose, but not at his fastest pace. He, like Rudd, was going to give every ounce of strength that he possessed in the final sprint.

As they started on the final lap Eby moved a little faster. There was still a faint hope that the American might overtake the Englishman, who failed to increase his speed. But as Rudd reached the box where the members of the British Embassy sat, he cut loose.

And how he did go! Eby also threw on the full-speed clutch. He, too, fairly flew over the track. But the crowd sat in silence, as they knew that only an accident to Rudd could prevent the Oxford-Cambridge team from winning.

Rudd crossed the tape with a terrific burst of speed, apparently just as fresh and as strong as when he started. The crowd, appreciating the fact that they were looking at a great runner, gave Rudd a rousing ovation.

Yates, of Illinois, finished about five yards in front of Eby, whose great finish gave Penn third place over Cornell. The four other teams were far in the rear.

Hall's Distemper has led the way to a new era in house decoration—the era of brighter, cleaner and healthier homes.

It is the most durable of all decorations, lasting for years with freshness unimpaired, whereas wall-papers deteriorate from the first day by fading and accumulating dust and dirt.

Hall's Distemper is a thorough disinfectant, and is applied directly upon the wall, forming a hard surface, from which dust and dirt may be "spring-cleaned" by lightly sponging with warm water.

Some Interesting Speculations About Mars—How It Compares With Earth In Age, Size And Gravity

BY GARRETT P. SERVISS

Cool your heated mind by looking at the stars. Take a plunge in the infinite. The mental temperature is to high on this earth just now. The spirits in some human thermometers seem to be almost at the boiling point and ready to burst the tubes. The public atmosphere has reached a state of recalescence in the process of gradual cooling down from the fusion of the war, so that incandescent bursts are felt in it like streaks of heat on a stifling Summer's day.

At such a moment Mars strides through the sky, fluttering his riddles and calling off the excited imagination with an invitation to make a 50,000,000-mile flight through the cool ether and see the earth, with its fizzling spirits, itself reduced to the dimensions of a flickering star in the sunset.

We have lately talked of Mars and the possibility of communicating with his inhabitants, if he has any, but the subject is inexhaustible and continually provokes renewed curiosity. Here are some more viewpoints.

EARTH'S GRAVITY GREATER

Mars is a small planet. The earth in his place would look nearer four than three times as large as he does. He is gravitationally a weak planet, for the earth's inherent force of gravity exceeds his almost as 10 to 1. But, very curiously, his relative smallness helps him in the comparison, for if we consider the weight of bodies on the surfaces of the two planets, we find that the superiority of the earth diminishes to the ratio of only about 2½ to 1.

Yet, if Mars were swelled to the size of the earth, without at the same time gaining proportionally in mass, his case would become hopeless. For then gravity on his surface would be only one tenth of what it is here, and not a single element of the air which we breathe would Mars be able to retain!

Why not? Because in that case a body, or a particle, shot away from the surface of Mars at a speed of 5,900 feet per second, would escape into space and never return. Now, even the molecules of carbon dioxide, the least active of the atmospheric gases, have a vibratory velocity of as much as 8,400 feet per second, while the others have still higher velocities, so that they would all fly off as fast as steam from a hot stoveplate.

But in consequence of the increased grip which Mars gets on his atmosphere by virtue of his smaller radius he is able to hold, though not so securely as the earth does, all of the gases that constitute our atmosphere.

A body, or particle, would have to start from Mars with a velocity of more than three miles per second in order to escape, and that exceeds by more than half a mile the speed of vibration of the molecules of water vapor. Accordingly, we may concede that Mars probably has water on his surface, and that the white cap which the watching astronomers at this time see slowly shrinking about his north pole really consists of what it looks like namely, snow.

That cap shrinks in extent because it is Summer time in Mars's northern hemisphere, and as the snow goes the water flows—at least so say the observers at the Lowell Observatory and a few others. But some astronomers reply: "These spidery lines that you think you see on Mars are all in your eye, or even if there is something of that kind there it has nothing to do with the melting polar snow, and particularly nothing to do with any great irrigation scheme of your imaginary learned giants inhabiting the little planet Mars, and growing so big just because their planet is so small."

Why do they talk of the inhabitants of Mars being older, as a race, and therefore probably wiser and abler than we are? It is another argument based on size and mass. According to theory, a planet's age, not necessarily its absolute age in years, but its relative age as measured by its state of development, varies inversely with its size.

A PRECOCIOUS PUPIL

Assuming them all to have begun as molten bodies, which slowly cooled off, and supposing them to have had about the same proportional quantity of heat at the start of their career, it is reasonable to suppose that the smaller and less massive would cool off sooner than the others, and consequently would more rapidly run through the successive stages of development and advance.

So Mars is looked upon as a precocious pupil in the sun's big planetary school, who has ridged his brow with thought and got up to the head of the class, while his bigger and slower brothers and classmates are yet munching apples and playing horse. Ah if we could only know what they are saying about us up there in that red world, which looks like a ruby tonight lying in the lap of Virgo!

The Bashful Doughboy

The Gangplank, published by the American soldiers in the embarkation camp at Saint Nazaire France, printed the following: She was one of those girls everybody is sure to like, and the smile that played about her lips made all the boys who visited the Y hut feel satisfied that she was the right girl in the right place. But there was one buck who had taken advantage of the situation and had become quite friendly. Of course all the other boys noticed this and different opinions arose. Some thought that it was just another of those instantaneous affairs while others were convinced that he and she had been friends back in the States. One afternoon, while she sat in her usual place in the reading-room of the Y hut, he approached her, and the following conversation ensued: "I got off for a few minutes because I had something important to ask you." She lifted her eyes to his, and found his face had taken on a crimson hue. Her face changed color also. "Really now," she said, "you haven't come here to talk confidentially, have you?" "Well, I don't care who knows it, but I shouldn't like any one to hear me ask you," he replied. "But you have only known me a month, and——" "Yes, I know that, but I thought that you wouldn't refuse me, because I—I." "Hush," she said, "don't let all those boys hear you talk foolishly." There was a moment of silence and then she said as she looked into his crimson face: "Well, if it's so important whisper in my ear." His hands trembled and his face grew redder as he leaned over and whispered: "I wanted to ask you if—if you would—er—sew a button on my trousers for me."

Love In Spring

By ANGELA MORGAN

THE FLOOD

Love is like a rainstorm, beating me down;
Beating me close to the earth—
Life-giving earth—
Bringing my soul new birth.
O blessed rain, blessed torrent!
I love you, I crave you. Every cool, electric drop of you,
All the washing, pelting force of you I love.
The flood of your eyes, dearest,
The drenching light of your eyes—
It is like rain, making bright the meadow.
My dripping heart bends before
you,
With glad leaves glistening in the wet and the cool.
Love is like the rainstorm, beating me down!

AT NIGHT

Every night, I gather you into the fold;
I reach and herd all my thoughts
of you
Under the cover of my heart,
And shepherd them like tender lambs, white and plaintive.
You are so far away from me, you do not know
How every night I summon all my thoughts,
And so at last, I find and gather
you
Home to my breast.

DAWN

I heard you calling in the night,
The star-cool night, so tall and still;
And now I see you in the light
Spanning the Eastern hill.
Seeking your face to love and bless,
My face against the Dawn I press;
I hold my heart against the wind
Hoping your heart to find.
O lover, come and be to me
The flood, the dawn, the wind, the sea—
All these, all these my mate must be!

COLBY ASSERTS AMERICA IS FAR FROM ISOLATED

Great War Shattered The Tradition: War Power Saves Monroe Doctrine

DEFENDS NATIONS' LEAGUE

Secretary Sees Great Part For U.S. In Work Of Restoring World Order

Chicago, May 13.—America's position in the world today is "quite the reverse of isolation," Secretary of State Colby declared in an address tonight before the Chicago Bar Association. He defended the league of nations and pointed out that the United States had been saved from the actual test of war in defending the Monroe Doctrine.

The Secretary said that such a test had been prevented "not alone by the respect of the world for martial qualities and our sincere attachment to the doctrine, but by the European balance of power, which has checked the confidence and restrained the initiative of the nations which have from time to time been tempted to call the doctrine into question.

"Thus we see," he added, "that with reference to the Monroe Doctrine alone, our position has been quite the reverse of isolation. On the contrary we have been not only exposed repeatedly to the machinations of European powers, but have been to a demonstrable extent the beneficiary of the interplay of complicated currents of European policy.

"It remained for the great war to finally shatter the American tradition of isolation and to dispel the illusion of security arising from our geographical position. Again, as in 1812, the struggle to preserve neutrality was seen to be futile, and again we found America was not only in the world, but of it and that only by carrying her share of the world burden could we safeguard our own liberties and our own institutions.

"The great question before the world is the recovery of those ordered processes in which the peace and security of all nations rest. A question of even greater moment in the United States is to determine not only what our part shall be in the great struggle or recovery, but what part we shall play and what grade of dignity and respect we shall be content with in the new world order.

"It may be said that the Treaty of Versailles is the law of the world today. Yet we are told that the United States, acting obediently to the traditional policy of isolation, must abandon the Allies and seek peace by some circuitous and unconstitutional expedient, retaining the benefits of the treaty without assuming any of its burdens, holding the enemy to its performance, but contributing nothing to its enforcement."

He declared that the advice of Washington and Jefferson in regard to European alliances had been "interpreted in some quarters as meaning that the United States must hold aloof from world politics."

"Washington expressly declared himself as not averse to temporary alliances," he added. Nor did Jefferson object to alliances for the accomplishment of definite objects. Neither Washington nor Jefferson intended that the United States should refrain permanently from the exercise of its due influence in matters which properly concerned the peace and welfare of itself as a member of the community of nations."

Mr. Colby, in referring to the Monroe Doctrine, said that its source was distinctly European.

Siccawei Weather Reports

24.—The barometric maximum asserts itself more strongly between the Marianas and the Bonin; at the same time a depression develops in Mongolia, to the N. of the Ortos land. Regular monsoon at sea and nearly along our whole coast. Overcast but fine weather in our Valley and in the N. Rain in the Formosa Strait.

25.—Very fine morning. Weather cloudy and cool. The pressure continues its movement upwards moderate S.S.E. breezes.

SAYS NOT TO SPEND NOW

'Sit Tight And Wait For The Calm,' Wanamaker Warns

Philadelphia, May 15.—"Although I firmly affirm that people have not been giddy in their extravagance during these days of high prices, I would tell everyone to sit tight for a while and wait until things have calmed down before spending all that they have."

This quiet advice from John Wanamaker, one of America's merchant kings, sounded strange in his handsomely fitted office, rich in the atmosphere of decades of successful business—a business dependent upon the willingness of people to spend money.

Yet there he sat, advising against spending too much—the weakness of a woman when a sale such as he advertises appears with all its alluring appeal in the newspapers.

"I do not prophesy a panic," Mr. Wanamaker continued, "and, contrary to the belief of many, my recent step in cutting prices was not due to any inside 'tip' that there was to be a sudden tumbling of prices. As a matter of fact, none of us knows from day to day what the next day will bring forth. Prices are a product of world conditions, and a ripple over the life in Timbuctoo may swerve Wall Street."

The merchant paused a deep moment in deep thought.

"In making my decision to strike at prices I merely acted on the conviction that this condition of uncertainty with us could go on indefinitely. And then, too, there is the great problem of labor. I saw that labor was restless, refusing to work at all, or declining to give its full self to industry. And with such conditions national productivity, which is our salvation, inevitably would be retarded."
